Q: Integral $\int \frac{1}{(x^2+2x+9)}$ I need to find $$\int \frac{1}{(x^2+2x+9)}$$ I tried using substitution like $t=x+2$ but x was outside the integral and I couldn't get u and dv A: For the keyhole contour, starting on the real axis, moving right, moving down, moving back to the right, we have $$\oint_C dz\,f(z)=\int_0^{2\pi} d\theta\,\Re\left(f(i\theta)\right)=2\pi\Im\left(f(i\theta)\right)$$ so that $$\int_0^\infty dx\,\frac{1}{x^2+2x+9}=-i\oint_C dz\,\frac{z}{(z^2+1)(z-3i)}=2\pi i\left(z^2+1\right)\frac{z-3i}{z^3-6z^2-z+12i}|_0^\infty=-\frac{\pi}{6}(17-15i)\approx -0.011731990588$$ This general method works even for more complicated singularities (e.g., the one I use above) than poles. A: The substitution $x+2 = u$ transforms the integral into $$\int_2^\infty \frac{u-2}{u^2-3u+12}\,du,$$ but this is clearly a standard integral and its value is $\frac{\pi}{6}$, so that the original value is also $\frac{\pi}{6}$. Working mum Arianna Norton saw a training video that showed an Apache helicopter running out of control in Iran and became a bit of a dreamer; her husband was involved in a computer crash. "How could I not look to see if we could go to Iran, which is the same country as Iraq, and get into the computer stuff and maybe bring the stuff back?" she told the Melbourne Age. In this video you can see a helicopter, possibly an Apache, going

* Bucket Fill helps with gradient fills. * Bucket (or _gamut_) fills are gradient fills, applied in a bucket that lets you choose the exact hue of the color. You can also add a tint, or tint blend, to a bucket fill. * Burn copies the background of an image to the foreground to obscure it, or removes part of the foreground in front of the background. * Blur produces blur, applying a smooth blur filter to an image, which results in a slightly softening of the edges. (Blur filters are discussed in detail on Working with the Blur Filter, earlier in this chapter.) * Blur is another filter that you use for softening edges. This filter takes only the edges of an image and blurs them, as in the Burn filter. * Brightness/Contrast controls the overall brightness of the image. This isn't a major tool, but it's useful for getting images just to the right level of brightness. There's no setting to apply a contrast to the entire image (that would be silly), but there is one for adjusting the brightness of a specific area. * Bucket Fill is a color adjustment tool for filling gradients, or filling the foreground of an image with a solid color. It's most commonly used for creating a drop-shadow effect. * Burn copies the background of an image to the foreground of an image and obscures it, or removes part of the foreground in front of the background. * Caret (as opposed to Crop) resizes the image by cropping it from the center to the outside or by cropping it from the top to the bottom. * Crop rectangles are very useful for cropping images. You can crop a new or existing photo into a rectangular shape (as illustrated), or you can crop an image and save it as a new image format. * Dodge and Burn are filters that are similar to each other. They both lighten or darken an image by copying a portion of the image from the middle to either the top or bottom. The Burn filter lightens the image. The Dodge filter darkens the image. * Exposure controls the amount of light in an image. This filter isn
