- Allows the use of a database to keep track of the various information required to run a guestbook. - All information added will then be processed to produce a format for viewing. - Can be used with both HTML and ASP based guestbooks. - There are a number of classes which can be found through the Help system and usergroup, as well as the link on the left of this page. - Built-in Guestbook Functions allow for quick creation of a simple or advanced 'add your name' and 'send a message' type of guestbook. - When using this module, it is necessary to have a table created for adding your guestbook entries, however, this is very simple. - If you require a more complex system, I strongly recommend that you look at the DbGuestbook module or the more advanced Visual Guestbook. The code takes all of the details required to display the guestbook in a format that is easy for anyone to use. The possibilities are endless. 5. Display the Guestbook: This is the final step in creating the Guestbook. The code simply displays the list of entries, the actual entry for each, and allows the guest to 'send a message'.
