This is my code: `df = pd.DataFrame(train) df['sales'] = df.apply(lambda x: x['sales'].sum(), axis=1)` I want to add the 'sales' of df to my 'sales' of df2. So, 'sales' from df2 has to be added to df. This would be easy if I added both dataframes to one. But I have to add both of them. I have also tried: `df.assign(sales=df['sales'].sum())` But that did not work. The deal was announced Wednesday as President Obama arrived in the United States for the first time as president and solemnly paid his respects to the victims. The families are getting a lump-sum payment, as well as monthly payments for the rest of their lives. The government will also be required to make reparation payments to people who lived in the same buildings as the victims. The money will be paid out over a number of years. The Department of Homeland Security said the cost of the reparations payments is $6,388,412,080. The families are getting $6.5 million apiece.
