[Management of small size renal tumor]. The management of renal cell carcinoma is usually conservative. This is mainly due to the lack of evidence in favor of radical surgery in these small tumors. There is no proof of more or less functional or oncological outcome in favor of radical surgery. However this approach is usually discussed in patients with tumor diameter less than 4 cm. We report our experience of a high risk population. From January 1987 to December 1993, 100 consecutive patients underwent conservative surgery for renal carcinoma. The mean age was 69 years (34-87). Thirty-eight tumors were less than 4 cm. The mean tumor diameter was 3.5 cm (1-5). All patients had a laparoscopic procedure. Six patients had two renal tumors treated at the same time. The mean operating time was 217 minutes (200-300). Postoperative complications occurred in 16 patients, with five deaths. At a mean follow-up of 36 months (3-97), 33 patients developed local tumor recurrence: 12 in operated and 21 in nonoperated tumors. Ten patients have died. Radiologic assessment of tumor status was performed in 35 patients at a mean follow-up of 35 months (12-97). There was a significant difference in tumor diameter and extravascular invasion in patients with local tumor recurrence. Extracapsular extension was also significantly associated with local tumor recurrence. This study suggests that patients with small renal cell carcinomas are at high risk of local recurrence even after complete resection. Treatment of these patients with conservative surgery and close postoperative follow-up should be discussed.package main import ("context" "fmt" "os" "os/signal" "syscall" "time" "github.com/coreos/etcd/client" "github.com/coreos/etcd/clientv3" "github.com/coreos/etcd/etcdserver/api" "github.com/coreos/etcd/etcdserver/api/v3client" "github.com/coreos/etcd/etcdserver/api/v3client/options" "github.com/coreos/etcd/etcdserver/api/v3client/recovery" "github.com/coreos/etcd/etcdserver/api

Wives of Club employees should be hit by hand sanitisers Issue Date : October 25, 2014 During the U.N. World Health Organization meeting in May 2013, WHO director-general Margaret Chan made a startling recommendation to club host countries: "Ban on alcohol". She said, "Alcohol consumption contributes to more than 200 000 deaths each year from liver cirrhosis and other diseases. Alcohol also causes domestic violence and crime, road accidents, social problems and HIV infection." With all due respect, it is a gross understatement of the real effects of alcohol consumption. Not only are the personal health of the user affected, but also many innocent people in the community are needlessly endangered. During 2007 to 2011, the number of people admitted to hospital for being poisoned by drinking alcohol increased by 34.3%, according to the World Health Organisation (WHO). And over the same period, deaths from the disease increased by 35.4%. The WHO report found that in rural areas, 94% of people die of alcohol-related diseases, compared with 84% in urban areas. On top of this, in rural areas 90% of men are absent from work due to alcohol-related disease, compared with 66% of men in urban areas. Simple statistical reports made by the WHO in their publication, "Alcohol use disorders and the burden of disease", show that alcohol consumption is a key factor in the majority of deaths, disability and disease in the world. That is why the South African Department of Health should stop banning not only drinking from a glass of wine, but also from drinking spirits, beer and soft drinks. This is the only way to stop the dangerous attitude that is commonly held in club communities about the negative effects of alcohol. Wives should be hit by hand sanitisers Most of the ladies who drink in club bar also work. Unlike their husbands who can purchase bottles of wine at the wine cellar, they don't have access to sanitisers. It is time to seriously consider the role of women in the community, and we are advising that every woman should be required to use hand sanitiser when touching items in their environment. Women should also be required to disinfect their hands after using the toilet.Same-sex intimacy in spouses predicts couples' marital adjustment. A study was conducted to determine the relationship between same-sex intimacy and marital adjustment in a sample of couples.
