Q: How to return a string while creating an object in BCL I'm trying to create a class which have a very similar name with another class in .NET Framework. For instance, ClassA is the default class name for the DataRowView. Then, at the end I want to return a string which is the new object name, as shown below: public class ClassA { public string Name { get; set; } } public class ClassB : ClassA { public string Name { get; set; } public override string ToString() { return Name; } } public string ToString(ClassA cls) { //New object return cls.ToString() + "." +cls.Name; } public static void Main() { var a = new ClassA(); var b = new ClassB() { Name = "ABC" }; Console.WriteLine(b.ToString()); Console.Read(); } The expected output of this code is "ClassA.ABC", but I'm getting "ClassA" without "ABC". How can I fix this problem? A: This is because the object a is a reference to the same object. You need to instantiate it again so that you create two different objects: var a = new ClassA(); var b = new ClassB() { Name = "ABC" }; // Create a different instance to print correctly: Console.WriteLine(b.ToString()); You can simplify this by using the static ToString function without passing in the class. If it's in a base class, it will return the base type name (string in this example). You will still need to instantiate the derived type though. Console.WriteLine(ClassA.ToString()); You also don't need to override ToString since the base method is virtual and it will still call it when you want. You also need to specify the return type if you override the base method public override string ToString() { return Name; } If you want to avoid hardcoding

Q: MongoDB Automatically Update row when a field changes I have some users who have a field called user_gender(varchar). So all the time user_gender = male then, I need to do some action in mongoDB (for example set the payment_type to "Paid", for female users set to "Subscription") I found that MongoDB has a feature to automatically update the entire row instead of update the specific field. But I want to avoid doing the update operation to the entire row, because for male users are not paid, and for female users are not subscription. So is there anyway to do this without doing an update operation to the entire row, but instead to only certain field A: You can use below aggregation $addFields : { "user_gender":{$cond : [{ $eq : [ "$user_gender", "male"]}], "Paid", { "$substrCP": [ "$user_gender","0",3], "subscription": "Subscription" }}} } Q: Pythonic equivalent of $2 mod 10 In Java you could do this: public static int mod10(int num) { return num % 10; } This is the same as doing (int)(num/10) which works with floats as well as ints. Is there a Pythonic way to do this? A: The following in Python3.4:
