Added new software Comparison of polymerase chain reaction and nested polymerase chain reaction methods for detection of Porphyromonas gingivalis in plaque specimens. The aim of the study was to compare the polymerase chain reaction (PCR) and nested PCR methods of detecting DNA of Porphyromonas gingivalis in plaque specimens. The study group consisted of 30 subgingival plaque samples, taken from 7 healthy volunteers and 23 patients with chronic periodontitis (CP), and subdivided into two groups according to the selected treatment. In the first phase of the study, samples were cultured and then evaluated by PCR for P. gingivalis. The isolates were identified with reference to 16S rRNA gene-PCR products, and the presence of fimA gene was verified with PCR. In the second phase of the study, DNA from randomly selected samples was amplified and the products were used in nested PCR for detection of P. gingivalis fimA. The results were compared and evaluated statistically. P. gingivalis was recovered from 23 plaque samples, including 19 from patients with CP (12 from untreated, 2 from patients who underwent full-mouth scaling, and 5 from patients after periodontal surgery and removal of supragingival plaque). Specific P. gingivalis DNA was detected in 22 plaque samples by PCR and all of them were positive by nested PCR. The percentage of patients positive for P. gingivalis DNA was not different between healthy, scaling, and surgical specimens; however, a higher percentage of PCR-positive samples was found in
