On a good day, he'll reply, "I'm leaving in 10 minutes" and I'll say, "Cool!" and hang up. Then I'll have a cup of coffee on the porch until it's time to leave. On Saturday I called him. "I'm leaving in 15 minutes," he said. He wasn't wearing his pajamas, or anything else, for that matter. "Where are you?" I asked. "I'm at my desk," he replied. "Are you standing up?" "Yes," he answered. "On the bike?" "Yes." "That's interesting," I said, but I was secretly thinking, "What the hell are you doing?" He's cycling from his apartment to his office at Boston University's Sloan School of Management, which is about a 10-minute walk from his building. He's been doing this for a year, and it's fun and relatively easy: first he
