This article has seven Photoshop tutorials that are quick to complete. These tutorials are by no means complete, but they do a fine job of covering the topics and give the user a foundation on which to build. Photoshop Tutorials 1. Increase Exposure Increasing the exposure of a photo is a surprisingly easy task. It's a common alteration that is often applied with filters to make an image "pop." Photoshop also has a function to easily increase exposure without needing to apply a filter. Start by opening up a file by double-clicking on the file that you'd like to edit in Photoshop. In the top menu bar, you'll see a command to Open. Click this and Photoshop will load the file. Once loaded, click File and then Open. When a file opens, you'll see a list of options in the top menu bar. Near the top is Open. Click this and Photoshop will load the file. As the file is loading, you'll see that there are multiple options to choose from. The first is from "Up" to "Down." You want to select "Up" to increase the exposure. Once "Up" is selected, click on the drop-down arrow next to "Exposure" and select "Increase Exposure" (see Figure 1). The exposure will increase, as will the luminance of the image, so it is recommended that a preview of the image is shown before making any alterations. If you decide to increase the exposure more, there are numerous ways to do so. The user can manually increase the slider all the way to the right (Figure 2). Another way is to use the brightness and contrast commands. These can be found in the top menu bar and are very similar to the way that these features are used in the Gimp and other software. Open the brightness and contrast dialog boxes by clicking on Image and going to Adjustments > Brightness-Contrast. Lastly, you can use the saturation and color slider. Simply click on Color, click on the two arrowed boxes, and drag the slider to the left. The image will increase in saturation, which is the colorfulness of an image, and the luminance will increase as well. The image is darkening as the lightness and saturation increase. The effect is similar to increasing the exposure with a filter. You will likely want to preview before making any changes in Photoshop. If you want to apply this type of adjustment throughout an image, or if you would

Q: Reduced form of tridiagonal matrix I have been trying to reduce this matrix and haven't been able to do so. I tried using Gaussian elimination method which with r_is and s_is being the rows and columns of the matrix A. I know that the matrix looks like a tridiagonal matrix, but I couldn't get it to that form. $\begin{bmatrix} 0 & 2 & -1\\ -2 & 2 & 0\\ -1 & -1 & 1\\ \end{bmatrix}$ I was able to get this matrix to be the upper triangular form for the matrix. But I'm not able to find the canonical basis of this matrix. Any help is appreciated. A: You can try Gaussian elimination on this tridiagonal matrix D. $$\begin{array}{ccc} \text{Column 2:}\quad&s_2&r_2&s_2\\ \text{Column 1:}\quad&-s_2-s_1&-2r_2&-s_2-s_1\\ \text{Row 3:}\quad&r_3&s_3&r_3\\ \text{Row 2:}\quad&s_2-s_3&r_2-r_3&s_2-s_3\\ \text{Row 1:}\quad&s_1&r_1&s_1\\ \end{array}$$ The present invention relates generally to the field of battery technology, and more specifically to batteries and battery packs containing rechargeable batteries that may be used in an electric vehicle. It is known to use lithium-ion batteries in electric vehicles. Such batteries include several lithium-ion battery cells that are coupled together in series to provide a desired voltage and current to power an electric motor. However, electric vehicles are often subjected to extreme conditions, including high speed/torque and high temperature/humidity, for which conventional lithium-ion batteries may not be optimally suited.Wednesday, February 17, 2012 Memorial Stones (Maya's Story) When Mayav told me what she wanted to write, I was nervous. Q: String::substr(): start parameter 1 does not point to an array in C program In main() I get this error: "String::substr(): start parameter 1 does not point to an array" Here's my code: #include #include #include int main() { char word[500]; scanf("%s", word); printf("%s", word); strcpy(word, word); strcat(word,"er"); printf(" %s", word); return 0; } A: strcat(word,"er"); You are trying to concatenate a char array onto a string. That's not allowed. The first array element is not stored in the string (as it's not an array), but somewhere between the 1st and 2nd array elements. To concatenate the string literals "Hello" and "er" onto the string word, use: strcat(word, "er"); // ^^^^^^^^ // added A: If you are trying to append character array "er" to the first array element of word then strcpy(word, word); strcat(word, "er"); will do. If you are trying to append one character array to other then char word[100] = "Hello"; char word2[100] = "Word"; strcpy(word, word2); //copying not appending strcat(word, "er"); //gives same error You can try char word[100] = "Hello"; char word2[100] = "World"; word2[0] = '\0'; strcpy(word, word2); // Copying strcat(word, "er"); // Gives same error Q: Can human Mars travel be made to become part of a single Hohmann Transfer orbit?
