2.0 Lead designer and AutoCAD's first developer, Hildebrandt [url= Hildebrandt/] (shown above in the blue shirt), was hired by Autodesk in 1978 as a CAD senior designer. He became AutoCAD's lead designer, helping to develop the first version of the software. In 1980, AutoCAD 1.0 was shipped to the public, and by 1988, the program had sold 10 million copies and was a bestseller. 3.0 A template or drawing template is a file that lets you create a drawing very quickly by simply setting or changing options. Unlike a drawing, which has no logical order to how it is laid out and connected, a template tells the software what the paper size is, what the paper orientation is, what view is being used, and what tool is being used to create the drawing. [url= Wiki/] 5.0 The AutoCAD 2010 logo (shown left), created in 2010, contains three arrows that form a triangle. This shape resembles the Autodesk logo (shown right), which was first designed in 1972 by Albert Jensen for his software company, 3D Systems. It was re-introduced in 1999 as part of a brand refresh by Autodesk. 5.1 Automated drafting is a method for drafting that allows a user to input a command sequence and then instantly preview the final result. The commands are edited or added, and the resulting picture is immediately shown on screen. [url= article/] 6.0 When one part of a drawing is rotated, a mirror image of that part is created. As the drawing is rotated 90 degrees, the mirror image is rotated 180 degrees. 7.0 Acronyms for Autodesk are: A & C for AutoCAD; D for Design; E for Education; R for Research; S for Software; and V for V-Ray. 8.0 Autodesk is based in San Rafael, California. Category:AutoCADToxicity of 2,4,6-trinitrotoluene on survival and reproduction of zebrafish (Danio rerio) embryos and larvae. The toxic effect of 2,4,6-trinitrotoluene (TNT) was evaluated using zebrafish (Danio rerio) embryos and larvae. Embryo, larval and adult fish were exposed to TNT for 5 d to determine lethal concentrations (LC(50)s) and 14 d to determine sublethal concentrations (LC(10)s). The 48 h LC(50) for embryos was 1.83 mg/L TNT, whereas LC(50) for larvae was 0.03 mg/L. The LC(50)s for TNT in adult fish were 4.29 mg/L for 24 h and 13.21 mg/L for 96 h. A significant increase in the ratio of dead larvae was observed with an increase in TNT concentration, and a significant reduction in the ratio of live larvae was observed with a decrease in TNT concentration. The LC(10) for the embryonic and larval stages was 0.02 mg/L, and the LC(10) for the adult stage was 0.45 mg/L. Based on the mortality ratio, the toxicity of TNT to fish embryos and larvae was less severe than for adult fish. In addition, a significant reduction in the survival ratio of embryos and larvae was observed with exposure to TNT concentrations of 0.05, 0.10, 0.25 and 0.50 mg/L. However, no apparent effects on the reproductive index or morphological abnormality were observed in embryos or larvae exposed to TNT. This study indicates that the fish embryo and larva are more sensitive to the toxicity of TNT than the adult. ca3bfb1094
