This is the ultimate game of skill and dexterity with a casual party atmosphere. "Take it to the mean streets where the cowards play chicken and the [expletive deleted] murder their grandma's!"

-Buster! The game is played on a 30-cell board and is centered around points. Dropping bombs to blow up little green plants will score points, while dropping bombs on other players will earn points for the player with the highest score. A player may also score points by running over other players.

This game can have rough edges for a party game like this. Other players may not be careful if they're trying to avoid someone or something they don't want to hit! For downlink (DL) transmission, multiple-input and multiple-output (MIMO) techniques are widely considered as an important tool to cope with the high spectral efficiency that has been pursued by the 3rd Generation Partnership Project (3GPP) Long Term Evolution (LTE) initiative. A MIMO technique uses multiple antennas on a base station side and multiple antennas on a user equipment side to enhance data transmission and reception efficiency of the wireless communication system.

FIG. 1 is a schematic diagram of a wireless communication system according to the related art.

Referring to FIG. 1, in wireless communication systems of the related art, a base station 110 transmits data to user equipments (UEs) 120, 130 via a downlink. In this case, the base station 110 generally transmits data using a single data channel from one antenna. In recent years, however, it has been required to meet various requirements of users' services, such as high-rate and high-capacity services, and thus, a multiple-input and multiple-output (MIMO) technique in which multiple data channels are established between the base station and the user equipment has been proposed.

According to the multiple data channels, capacity can be increased as much as a minimum of a number of antennas times a number of data channels. Referring to FIG. 1, Game "The GFWL version of Deer Hunter is made to be played under my original concept, rather than the GFWL concept which was made to be played with no paint or customizations. The main purpose of this version is to have a quicker gameplay as well as a level editor where you can create the levels yourself. The level editor is also easier to use, as you only have to key the name of the level into the editor, and not fill out all of the boxes." See our gameplay videos to get an idea of how the game plays, you can see the developer's limited version below. The game uses a physics engine that can be customized as well as scripting to help make your gameplay more unique. The script section allows for writing script that's used in the game. Some scripting examples are: Actions Changing themes Handling lobbies Changing weapons Changing and releasing keys Patching and filtering keys Creating your own gamemodes Exiting the game Managing weapons Checking your keys Sending and receiving text messages If you plan on playing the game under a limited version, the way it's done is by using a standalone executable that's called "Server.exe" and runs under a Windows Service. It's basically a modified version of the Windows service used to run "GSWAmerak." "GSWAmerak" is a GFWL clan-based PvP game which uses the concept of a "server". Each server is run on a separate computer and when you connect to a server, you connect to another computer. "Server" will be your only local server, as you cannot connect to the worldwide GFWL servers. GSWAmerak Server Tutorial 1. There are two ways to start up a GSWAmerak server. The first way is to just double-click "Server.exe". If you do this, a game menu will open up. 2. It would be easier if you use the third method which is to download the "Server.zip" archive. Inside the "Server.zip" you will see the main exe "Server.exe", the runtime exe "Addon.exe", and the GUI exe "Config.exe". 3. Before you start the GSWAmerak server, you should have at least one game mode already created. Otherwise the server will fail.

An Israeli researcher is taking to the airwaves to encourage people to get tested for herpes and other sexually transmitted infections, mainly because he believes many people are unaware of the simple test options available. Michal Itzchak, a veterinarian from Tel Aviv, is making the rounds on Israeli radio to educate people about testing. More tests and methods is exactly what's needed. "Not enough is being done to prevent STDs because people don't know about the tests," he wrote on a recent show on Channel 10. "If we reach a huge portion of the public we can really do something about this." TESTING FOR HERPES IS CHEAP, EASY AND SAFE, BUT MANY PEOPLE MISS OUT Herpes? In an HIV outbreak in New York City, the health department discovered 43 cases of herpes, but only seven people had been tested. "Almost half the population is infected with herpes," Itzchak said. "That's a pretty huge number. Most people are not aware of herpes because the herpes simplex virus (HSV) does not have an obvious carrier state."
