EnjoyQ: How to partition a table into tuples that sort on multiple criteria efficiently? I am looking for a way to partition a table into 2 kinds of triads in an efficient way. I have a column named color in the table called theFlowers. The number of columns is N. The outcome that I want is 3 columns: (A, B, C) where (A, B) is the first triad and (B, C) is the second triad. The triads must be ordered in the column color by a rule of the form: $A > C$ $A = B = C$ The rule of the form: $A > C$ $A = B = C$ are not good because they would satisfy the rule for only one color. Thank you. EDIT The output must be stored in PostgreSQL. A: For PostgreSQL, you can use a CTE (Common Table Expression) with a window function and order by: with cte as (select f.*, (case when min(f.color) over (partition by color) = max(f.color) over (partition by color) then null else 1
