Help me fix the source code - UptoolB34-38-39.The New York Post ran a front page photo of Russian President Vladimir Putin's advisor Yuri Ushakov hugging a child with disabilities, to push a conspiracy theory about the Obama administration that the White House is abusing children. In their cartoon, the image of the abused child is accompanied by the words, "Putin's advisors reportedly molested." The cartoon and a related banner headline are accompanied by a photo of President Barack Obama and a statement, "Fugitive released." The Post published the print edition of their cartoon on July 11, 2016, which was created by cartoonist and satirist Tom Toles. The Post claims that the Obama administration is "abusing children" in Russia and other foreign countries, and highlights Putin's advisor Ushakov and his alleged molestation of a 13-year-old boy. The publication did not provide any information on the alleged incidents, and instead cited an unreliable, and dangerous, report. The claims against Ushakov are potentially dangerous, as news has circulated that he may be the Kremlin's point man
