MagixMovieEditPro15PlusDownloadVersionSerialNumber.Q: how to install php7.0 on centos7? I want to install a php 7.0 on centos7. But I don't know how to do it. A: If you are using yum then first enable centos7 repositories (if not already enabled) yum install yum install Then install as default packages yum install php70-php yum install php70-cli Then remove previous php versions yum remove php56 php56-common yum remove php56 php56-cli then remove all php packages yum erase php* and also remove all apache php packages yum erase php* php* After that restart the apache service httpd restart For php in the command line use php -v And also look at the installation path php -l Q: Network - all computers connect, but one doesn't I have a network with 4 computers (2 servers, 2 clients). I made a share on the server and I can see in Network and Sharing Center in client computers that they can connect to that share. I can connect to this share from the client through \\computername. However, when I try to connect from the client computer to the server computer, I get "The request was unable to establish a connection with the server. Either the server is not running or it is not accessible. (Connect to server)" Thanks for any help. A: Check the network cable or power. If you have a wireless connection, double check that it's connected to the router and that the router is connected to the Internet. (this applies only if the router is actually meant to be a router - not a hub. If it is meant to be a hub, see the comment from VKR).
