These days we see some funny themed TV shows like The Office, South Park, and The Big Bang Theory. If we want to apply the same concept to movies, how can we make a movie based on the best scenes in the movies? Let's just say we have some dozen or so scenes in the movies that are most memorable for the fans. Would it be possible to apply the concept of a movie's best scene to a movie? Of course it could be, but that's too far from the reality. So, we can try to apply the concept to a small part of a movie. How can you come up with the idea of making a movie where the scenes are not about the story of the movie but about the best scenes in the movie? That would make the concept a little bit more interesting. So, I did. The movie I made is The Best Scenes and The Best Scenes. To tell you a little bit about the movie, it's about the movie that has the most number of scenes that I selected. It is a movie that's about a terrible event that happened in the past. It is about a man who wants to change something in the past, and how the events that happen in the past and in the present will change his life. The movie was based on the idea of a painting that is done by a famous artist. He does a painting about an event in the past. Many would say it's some sort of a history lesson, but it is really a painting about what actually happened in the past. You can ask: How many of you think the story is about an artist who wants to change the past with a painting? If you think it's not, just check the movie 6d1f23a050
