What is the relationship between Standard, Poor's and Dow Jones? The Security and Exchange Commission is a (usually) respected and influential organization in the United States. The popular perception is that the SEC makes the stock market. This is not true. The SEC is one of two government-run agencies that help keep the U.S. capital markets stable, fair and efficient. The other is the Federal Reserve. Think of the SEC and the Fed like Batman and Superman. They each have strengths and weaknesses. The SEC is publicly accountable. People can come to it, share information and then hear what it has to say. This is the best way to make sure market forces are not abused. It is the primary reason why people go to investment advisers, do a lot of research and then pick the best and most sensible investment decision. The SEC has rules and regulations, and it is a long way from 100% enforce
