Geography Barkly was located in the western suburbs of Perth, the capital of Western Australia, surrounding Lake Grace and forming part of the Darling Ranges. It was named after Sir Edward Barkly, the first Premier of Western Australia. History Barkly was one of the original 30 seats contested at the first election, held in 1894. It was initially a safe Labor seat, with Harry Vallance elected in 1895. In 1897, however, the Liberal candidates of King and Everard won the seat; Everard held it until 1914, when it was won by Labour candidate William Lovett. Lovett held the seat until his retirement in 1922. In 1930, the redistribution of seats in Western Australia saw Barkly divided in two. The eastern portion was incorporated into the new district of Cunderdin, with most of the Liberal-held portion of the district being incorporated into the new seat of Wenlock. Labor's Harry Vallance, who had held the seat from 1897 to 1922, won the new seat of Clayton by a narrow margin. Barkly was re-created in a redistribution before the 1938 state election. Although Labor had won the seat in 1933, with Harry Vallance again their candidate 6d1f23a050
