10.5 Crack Software. Someone in Britain is winning the EuroMillions jackpot worth Â£37 million - but they never told their friends and family that they won the money because they weren't asked to.
The person in question, a mother-of-one who has not been named, has been identified as the winner of a Â£37 million jackpot on Wednesday after they correctly chose all six numbers drawn in the EuroMillions draw. The unnamed woman is believed to have checked their ticket immediately after the draw and found the winning number. The jackpot was won with the five correct numbers and one miss, and all six numbers were drawn live on air. The lucky number in the lottery draw was 27 and the three lucky numbers were 13, 28 and 30. Misses 11, 14 and 16 also fell in on Wednesday's draw but they will not be paid for as they were drawn with the last number. According to the draw's rules, any winnings must be claimed within three months of the draw date and not disclosed to others. The lucky winner was not asked to keep the news quiet to avoid creating a public buzz. Nick Bayliss, of the National Lottery's draw security team, said: "It's quite extraordinary that a winning ticket of this value - and in such a reputable game - has been bought without the joy of a newspaper splash, radio, television or online announcement. "That said, we understand the winner's sense of privilege to have won such a prize." The National Lottery's security team said that it was aware that several winning tickets have been sold this week but it was believed that they were all communal tickets that had only been purchased by people who had looked at each other's tickets 6d1f23a050
